In the race for high-tech resources, Chinese miners outplay their Western rivals. Africa's copperbelt – which straddles the border of Zambia and the Democratic Republic of Congo – is the target of a high-stakes race for the key components of the 21st-century economy. The zone produces 70% of the world's cobalt, an essential component of electric car batteries and cell-phones, together with a cornucopia of lithium, nickel and rare earth minerals.
