Performance And The Politics Of

Performance, defined as structured behavior, always carries with it a consideration of the politics of embodiment. Using performance as an analytic lens to study everyday behavior we are able to see how different notions of corporeality are produced and contested: from the practices and regulations that shape racial formations to the normative scripts that structure everyday performances of gender and sexuality, and from the carefully crafted presentations of politicians to equally crafted ...

Performance, Politics, and Protest

From its very beginnings, theatre has been both an art and a public space, shared by actors and spectators. As a result, its entity and history is intimately tied to politics: a politics of inclusion and exclusion, of distributions and placements, of spatial appropriation and utopian concepts. This collection examines what is at stake when a theatrical space is created and when a performance takes place; it asks under what circumstances the topology of theatre becomes political.

This article develops a framework to examine the co-constitutive nature of performance and politics and to suggest that such a framework is critical to promoting an interdisciplinary approach to understanding our complex political world. It does this by disaggregating the component parts of political performance and suggesting how, once these are made visible, we are able to reflect upon more complex processes of its re-aggregation into our analysis of politics.
