Exploitation, and Empire is about how the power of an empire can take something as simple as leaf water and turn it into a massive industry that runs off of conquering others and bloodshed. Britain's obsession with Tea is what made it what it is today. They weren't even the first to have discovered Tea.

lost their empire, they retained control of much of the world's tea business, and high profits and low wages still flourish in the time of the teabag, multinational tea brands and supermarket strangleholds.

Roy Moxham's account of the addiction, exploitation and empire of tea takes us back to the original cultivation of tea in China when Buddha is believed by some to have introduced tea to China probably as a medicine, and to Britain when virtually all the tea was imported from China.
